PERSPECTIVES ON AWE-INSPIRING LANDSCAPES

Antarctica

The beauty of Antarctica lies in its rarity. Almost everything about the continent is exclusive to it in a nearly humbling way. Whether it's the Adélie penguins that steal stones from each other, or the jagged glacial monuments that cut through the azure water, its innocence is both overwhelming and a call for us to protect the continent.

"Antarctica is a land without people. It gave me a perspective on how this world would be without human civilisation, the feeling of the true wild. It refreshed me completely. When we reached human civilisation back after Antarctica and saw the first few houses and cars after two weeks, our hearts sank. The trip made me more conscious of ecology."

Andaman & Nicobar Islands

There's an air of mystery to the Andaman & Nicobar Islands—perhaps it's because out of the 500-plus islands that it consists of, very few are actually inhabited. The rest are untouched. It's this quiet sense of seclusion that attracts visitors to experience the reefs, the diving and the deep excursions through mangrove forests.

“Being in the Andamans is like being in so many different worlds at the same time—in one instant you’re surrounded by a green cover, and in the next, you’re diving into a sea of unknown.”

THE NEW NORMAL FOR CONCERTS

While virtual events will be around for a while, organisers are finding ways to bring people together in a safe way. Case in point: the concert at the Virgin Money Unity Arena that just took place. People were allowed to enjoy music from the likes of Sam Fender in a live setting but there were some precautions:

“I FEEL REBORN”

Singer Sunidhi Chauhan reflects on how the lockdown has helped her reset, and the big realisations it has prompted.

by GEETIKA SASAN BHANDARI photographed by HITESH SONIK

How has the lockdown been for you?

Honestly, it's been a blessing. I know that with all the difficulties people have faced, not all of us can say this, but for me it has. It made me realise how beautiful this time is. I've been able to bond with my son Tegh, and my husband Hitesh. It's made me realise the benefits of doing nothing at all—it's really been wonderful.

How has work been? Did it come to a standstill?

Live shows aren't happening, which is good because safety is important. Fortunately, I've been able to record songs at home, and I've realised it's a blessing to be able to record in the peace of your own house, in your favourite spot, just in your pyjamas! Compared to a studio where there will always be people and everyone has an opinion and you want to please them all, at home you can do your own thing. Of course, you keep in mind what is required, but I'm happy that whatever I sent was never sent back—it was perfect. Sometimes I put Tegh on my lap and record. I will always cherish this time—I had my baby on my lap and I recorded.

Did you have the required equipment at home to record?

Thanks to my husband Hitesh, who does his background scores, etc. from home, it was easy. A lot of times we would record after Tegh fell asleep, and that was a lot of fun. There was Earlier, people were functioning as machines, constantly in a race; they had forgotten how to live life, but now they've realised they can have balance.

some work that I couldn't take on because between running after my son, house work and cooking, there was hardly any time left. But, I've been busy like never before. Though, to be honest, even when I had help, being a new mom I used to do a lot by myself from Day 1, so I was used to it.

So how long has it been since you stepped out of home?

February 28 was the last live show, so I think that was the last time I stepped out until last Sunday (16th August). During the lockdown, we took a few short drives for Tegh.

That's a long time! So, what has kept you sane? People have taken to baking or vigorous workouts. What about you?

Insanity was before the lockdown, sanity is now. Looking after every corner of the house; that's been new. Plus, I've discovered the cook in me. Earlier, I didn't even know how to make Maggi, but now I can make paranths, poha, uttapam, dosa. You have to try my palak ki khichdi.

Where do you turn to for recipes?

YouTube! I don't mean to promote, but Hebbbar's Kitchen is a great channel with really good recipes.

And what is your daily fitness routine?

I didn't do anything at all in the first few months; I was really busy in the house. Then I stepped on the scale and saw I had lost 8kg. I spoke to my trainer and he told me that if I'm active, then that's what matters. So, I took that as a good start and recently started working out on my elliptical machine—earlier, it was used to hang up my laundry!

Has the lockdown prompted any reflections, any big realisations?

I've realised that nothing—not even a pandemic—can stop you from doing something you really want to do. I can be sitting in Jhumri Telaiya or Interlaken and be recording from there. I feel content. I feel like there's a new beginning—I feel reborn. The mental rest has helped me, helped my vocals. We have to rest, restart, and personally I love starting something new, or going back to learning something again. We have to see the light instead of focusing on the dark.

What's next? What are you looking forward to now?

For someone like me who has done so much work, I'm at peace when I get to record from home and it gets approved. To record like that, with just the pure joy of singing—that's liberating. A lot of things are changing—films are releasing only on the digital medium, there are no live shows for a while, and I'm fine with waiting it out. I'm looking forward to releasing singles. I'm ready. I've started to read books; I just finished The White Tiger.

How do you see the world adapting to all these changes?

One thing I have realised is that come what may, life moves on. People are always fearful—what will happen if this happens, etc.—but see what happened! And we have found ways to keep going. Earlier, people were functioning as machines, constantly in a race; they had forgotten how to live life, but now they've realised they can have balance. You can do something you love and still deliver at your own pace and spend time with family. And you can also carve out time for yourself. 🌻

Asian Elephant

© Dr Saket Badola

#DYK that elephants spend nearly 19 hours a day feeding and producing about 220 pounds of dung while wandering. This helps to disperse germinating seeds across a large area crucial to the health of the forest. Elephants use tusks to dig wells to access water and, in the process, create watering holes for other animals.

VICTIMS OF AN 'ELEPHANTINE' CRISIS

© James Morgan/WWF

© WCCB

With a population of 27000+ distributed across 23 states of India, the Asian Elephant Elephas maximus is found in subtropical broadleaf forests, tropical broadleaf moist forests, dry forests, and grasslands of the country. It has been accorded the highest protection under the Indian wildlife laws. The international trade of elephants and their body parts is also prohibited.

Elephants in India are revered, and hold a significant position in the nation's culture and religion. Despite this, the largest herbivore of the country has been facing a serious conservation crisis. Encroachment of forests, degradation of habitat and loss of migratory corridors are leading to escalation in human-elephant conflict, often with harmful outcomes on both the sides.

Elephants in India have also been a victim of poaching and illegal wildlife trade. Elephants are hunted mainly for their tusks (ivory) which are used to make jewellery, artefacts and other decorative items. Their body parts like skin, tail hair, molar teeth, bones and others are also in demand in national and international illegal wildlife trade markets.

A WANDERER AT WITS' END

Up for a book bingeing session? Who knows, these travel tales might just alter your understanding of life.

by AMEESHA RAIZADA

DARK STAR SAFARI

by Paul Theroux

Often deemed cynical, this book not only highlights the thrill of discovering the unknown and the unexpected, but also the familiar. Read it to embark on a life-changing trip through Africa—a trip where everything is left to chance, arrival and departure times are inconsequential, and pure fulfilment can be experienced while balancing on top of a truck in the middle of nowhere. Embracing soul searching, Dark Star Safari holds the key to calming a perturbed mind.

THE BEACH

by Alex Garland

Popular amongst backpackers, The Beach is a discourse on the urge of doing “something different and off the beaten path”. Set in Thailand, it follows a young explorer as he searches for life’s paradise through tranquil lagoons, self-sufficient plantations and underwater caves. The novel demonstrates how sometimes the search for an ideal can end up uncovering illusions, thus redefining the very meaning and essence of contentment.

ZEN AND THE ART OF MOTORCYCLE MAINTENANCE: AN INQUIRY INTO VALUES

by Robert M. Pirsig

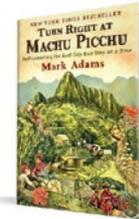

In this unconventional narrative, Pirsig recalls his 17-day motorcycle ride from Minnesota to Northern California with his son Chris. Their philosophical odyssey has the two delve into the mysteries of life—while guided by Plato—and their summer trip through the vivid landscapes of America becomes one of discovery and acceptance.

TURN RIGHT AT MACHU PICCHU

by Mark Adams

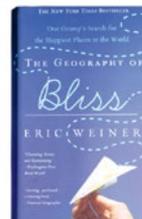

This pick comes from an adventure author who hadn’t even slept in a tent before this quest. Akin to time travelling, Adams tried to recreate Hiram Bingham’s 1911 trip to Machu Picchu, taking readers through lost cities and cultures. An introspective and humorous read, this book will allow you to look into the mind of the naïve traveller and understand ‘rediscovery’ in its deepest sense.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF BLISS

by Eric Weiner

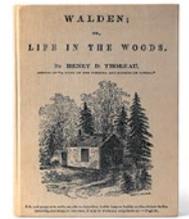

Imploring age-old curiosity, Weiner travelled across the globe in search of not the meaning, but the whereabouts of ‘happiness’. Thanks to his enigmatic writing, the reader becomes the author’s companion, together exploring the world. With poignant and surprising cultural observations, The Geography Of Bliss maps out the perfect bible for the restless mind on the move.

WALDEN

by Henry David Thoreau

After spending exactly two years, two months and two days on the shores of Walden Pond, Massachusetts, Thoreau penned the OG guide to living in the wilderness. Inspired by transcendental philosophy, Thoreau tried to understand society through self-introspection and the observation of nature; the passing seasons can be interpreted as portraying his own personal development and growth.

THE LONDON PUB CRAWL: UNDERGROUND EDITION

EYES ON LONDON

Whatever your idea of wellness is, the city has it covered in every form.

by ANAND KAPOOR

TO SAY THAT LONDON has something for everyone would be a grave understatement—it has something and more, no matter what your travel inclination is. When you visit it the first time, you get the joy of crossing off the major museums and tourist attractions, but the second visit opens up the streets you missed the first time; the buzziest pubs that have an understated cool factor that seems to be exclusive to London; parks that continue to remain in the period they were created in, offering a time capsule to the past; and the smaller museums and markets, where it's not uncommon to find a rarity. So, whatever your niche is, London's calling out.

WELLNESS AND YOU

Suffice to say that self-care is more important than ever, and more so in the times we're living in. You have options galore, including The House of Elemis in Mayfair, where you can try one of their speed services to unwind quickly. If your idea of wellness is more active, the Bamford Wellness Spa Brompton Cross has treatments that are steeped in both tradition and modernity, ranging from reiki rituals to mindful yoga or Pilates sessions (the latter have been tweaked to accommodate social distancing measures).

NATURE'S EMBRACE

We all need a higher dose of the outdoors these days,

FROM TOP
1. Henri Matisse's exhibition at Tate Modern; 2. The sublime Hill Garden & Pergola; 3. A fine dining experience at Barrafina; 4. Bliss galore at the Bamford spa

FROM TOP
5. An exciting culinary escapade at the Borough Market; 6. An afternoon well-spent at Hampstead Heath and London's sprawling acreage of greenery sets the bar for that. Start with The Hill Garden & Pergola, a well-kept secret that was created by a philanthropist for his family and friends to enjoy long summer evenings in the gardens. Close to the artsy town of Camden is Hampstead Heath, where you can escape the city and bask in the verdant greens that envelop you. Weave through the grass and imagine yourself to be in C.S. Lewis' magical world because legend has it that the heath played the role of the muse while Narnia was being made.

GO GOURMET

Planning your trip around where you want to eat and drink is recommended when in London. For something local, Spaniard's Inn offers a toothsome menu with a twist and a ready selection of ales.

Should you prefer your culinary experience with a side of showmanship, Covent Garden's Barrafina, an authentic Spanish tapas bar, has an open kitchen where you can see the chefs do their thing.

CULTURAL STOPOVER

If you've come to London in search of cultural enrichment, begin at the Tate Modern. Home to works from the likes of Henri Matisse, Piet Mondrian and Andy Warhol, admission is free for the majority of the displays. But, consider the Tate an appetite teaser, as just around the corner is the iconic Shakespeare's Globe, which has been actively producing digital content during the lockdown in order to disseminate information regarding racism and discrimination. If you want to combine food for your mind with food for your stomach, Borough Market checks both boxes. It's a 1,000-year-old market that sits at the foot of London Bridge; here you can sample fresh produce and interact with the local farmers to learn more. 🌟

ALSERKAL AVENUE

Once an industrial warehouse, this hub in Al Quoz is relentless in its creative activities. Pop-up exhibitions are easy to find, and there are spaces set aside for performing arts, so simply wandering around will leave you immersed. Galleries that you shouldn't miss include Lawrie Shabibi, Showcase, Custot and 1X1 Art Gallery. If you can't make it here, the lockdown has prompted Alserkal Avenue to make some of their offerings and classes available online, making art accessible wherever you are.

OPERA GALLERY

With galleries across the world, the Opera Gallery is known to display absorbing artwork by modern and contemporary artists for over a decade now. Their house in the Dubai International Finance Centre does the same, and also organises fairs and exhibitions for artists to globalise their reach. The gallery represents artists such as Lita Cabellut, André Brasilier, and many of its locations have also displayed the works of Pablo Picasso, Marc Chagall, Andy Warhol and Manolo Valdés.

DUBAI DESIGN DISTRICT

Popularly known as d3, the area is entirely devoted to creating a sort of creative ecosystem. With exhibitions, installations and sessions, d3's mission is to instil the spirit of collaboration among artists, while encouraging them to express their passion. The space has been used by various groups, including luxury brands and houses, and it is also home to shops and eateries in case you need a quick break.

JAMEEL ARTS CENTRE

With the scenic Jaddaf Waterfront as its backdrop, the Jameel Arts Centre has helped build recognition for art in the Middle East and even South Asia. Exhibitions currently on display include installations by Michael Rakowitz, an Iraqi-American artist. His work is an attempt to connect seemingly disjointed spheres, like pop culture and the socio-political environment, via the common platform of art. Take a tour of the artists' rooms for solo exhibitions such as Lawrence Abu Hamdan's This whole time there were no land mines, a sound and video installation. In alignment with the new COVID-19 safety norms, you have to book your viewing slot at the centre in advance.

Here's the best of Colombo, served in eight splendid plates.

by MEGHA UPPAL

YOU'LL FIND THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS IN COLOMBO.

The Sri Lankan capital has breezy beaches and a bustling city life; colonial architecture and a skyline of high rises; a vibrant, contemporary vibe and a quaint old-world charm. But what truly personifies Colombo, and sets it apart, is its food culture. A flag-bearer of the country's rich culinary traditions—a melange of the Dutch and Portuguese styles, South Indian influences, and signature Sri Lankan spices, fruits and tropical cuisine—Colombo is a gastronome's paradise thanks to the breathtaking array of options available.

So, here are eight dishes that truly define the city's food culture, and the places to experience them.

1 HOPPERS

These bowl-shaped pancakes made with rice flour and coconut milk are also known as appam. While they can be sweet or savoury, the most popular version is the egg hopper, which has an egg cracked in its middle.

4 WOOD APPLE

A soft centre with crunchy seeds and a thick fibre, the wood apple is a controversial fruit, thanks to its pungent smell. It is, however, one of the city's signature offerings. Its sweet-and-sour taste makes it unique; have as is or in a smoothie.

BEST PLACE TO TRY IT AT

5 KOTTU

This Sri Lankan hamburger is made using fried roti, chopped up with vegetables, egg, or meat. The final result looks like fried rice, and is eaten with a spicy curry sauce—a go-to snack for locals.

BEST PLACES TO TRY IT AT

VOC Cafe Dutch Burgher Union, 114,

7 POL SAMBOL

A coconut relish, pol sambol captures the essence of Colombo with its mix of spices and seafood. Red onions, chillies, lime juice, salt and Maldivian fish, all blended together, form this side dish you'll find at every eatery.

BEST PLACES TO TRY IT AT

Culture Colombo No 25 Kensington Garden

8 PARIPPU

Parippu or dhal curry is a staple in the Colombo diet. A version of the Indian masoor dal, this one's made using fresh coconut milk, mustard seeds and curry leaves. The onion, tomato, green chilli mix with cumin, turmeric and fenugreek make this bouquet of flavours an indulgent dish.

ESCAPE SOJOURN

Valley of Bliss

Dancing between rolling hills and snow-capped peaks, Kashmir is laced with serenity and wellness galore.

by BAYAR JAIN

Agar Firdaus bar ru-ye zamin ast, Hamin ast o hamin ast o hamin ast
(If there is Paradise on Earth,
It is this, it is this, it is this)

PENNED BY SUFI POET AMIR KHUSRAU

many moons ago in awe of Kashmir, the verse still stands true. Shining like a jewel in India's metaphorical crown, this northern Union Territory comes dressed in emerald-green villages posing daintily amid arid canyons and towering snow-capped peaks. A whiff of its cool air interlaced with fragrances of tulips, hyacinths and marigolds are an easy first step to relaxation. Pair this with the musk attar lingering in the air, and a feeling of inner peace is sure to seep in. Amid the rolling hills, galloping horses and alpine scenery lie wellness offerings ideal to help anyone looking to reset.

FOR MOUNTAIN LOVERS

The Khyber Himalayan Resort &

Spa in Gulmarg is one such haven of serenity. Spread over seven acres of a coniferous forest, this mountainside luxury retreat captures the tranquillity of the surrounding views and brings it inside, without compromising the architectural heritage of Kashmir. Picture locally-sourced pine cottages and rooms adorned by Kashmiri wool carpets that overlook beautifully landscaped gardens and enchanting forests. However, this dreamy vibe can be taken a notch higher with The Khyber Spa by L'Occitane. Stunning panoramic views from treatment rooms aside, the gentle warmth of a private steam chamber, the soothing aromas, the soulful music, and the indoor heated swimming pool complemented with glazed windows heighten the zen-like atmosphere. Beyond the glass walls of the property lies the Gulmarg Gondola—one of the world's highest and longest ski lifts. The two-stage gondola flies over powdery soft snow, taking skiers to a height of approximately 12,000 feet, resulting in a blissful view guaranteed to calm one's mind. The more adventurous folk can opt for a trek to the nearby Khilanmarg Valley, where summer transforms the land into a colourful canvas with spring flowers swaying in gentle harmony.

FOR NATURE SEEKERS

For more immersive healing, The Orchard Retreat & Spa amid lush apple orchards and the ancient groves of Srinagar, doubles as an ideal escape. With windows that open up to views of the Zabarwan Hills, this property celebrates the abundance of nature that embraces it. This ethos of luxurious tranquillity permeates into their in-house spa, which captures the healing energies of sound, touch and the sea to craft bespoke treatments for individualised rejuvenation. To round up the wellness journey, head to the steam and sauna rooms, and follow that up with a dip in their jacuzzi, where soft lounge music and Kashmiri kahwa (an aromatic green tea infused with the flavours of cardamom, cinnamon and saffron) greet you. While hydrotherapy, courtesy the jacuzzi, will help soothe overworked muscles and reduce stress, antioxidants present in the humble tea build immunity and keep seasonal infections at bay. As night befalls the open skies of this summer capital, a chill takes over, making the blazing heat from the bonfire ideal to soothe the soul. Lie down on the lush green fields to soak in the beauty of the starry sky. Pair this with Asian, Oriental and Mediterranean skewers straight off red hot embers for a memorable night that segues into a peaceful slumber.

ESCAPE SOJOURN

FOR LUXURY LOVERS

A more opulent affair awaits at Vivanta Dal View in the same town. Situated atop a hill and overlooking the famous Dal Lake, a freshwater lake lined by Mughal gardens, this six-acre property offers a bird's-eye view of the Tulip Garden. The Indira Gandhi Memorial Tulip Garden, as it is formally known, transforms into a rainbow of colours between March and May, owing to the many carpets of terraced flowers—with tulips making up the bulk—that bloom here. However, the five-star property has more than just famed flowers to showcase. During the winter, the snow-capped peaks of the Zabarwan range come to the fore, while the spring and autumn months are dedicated to the Gulmarg range and the Chinars respectively. The spirit of the valley, on the other hand, is celebrated all year long. Accentuated by copper and local timber carvings, each space of the accommodation lends itself to the Kashmiri way of life. And, whether it is sipping on speciality coffees or herbal teas at the Tea Lounge, or enjoying a lavish wazwan meal (a traditional, slow fire-cooked, multi-course meal) at the hotel's deck, local flavours sweep the palate. You can also drop by at The Vivanta Fitness Centre, where cardio machines and circuit training offer a different kind of destress.

FOR SOLITUDE SEEKERS

Tucked away in Kashmir's Anantnag district is The Chinar Resort & Spa. Located in Pahalgam—a land adorned by pristine waters, particularly of river Lidder, and lush green meadows that seem straight out of a fantasy novel—the resort has been crafted with a modern approach to architecture, but it still embraces nature in its entirety. Wake up to the absolutely gorgeous views of the Batakoot mountains and witness the morning sun gently caressing the peaks. This is truly a great destination to recentre oneself at. Because, after all, isn't nature the best healer? And in Kashmir, it exists in abundance. 🌸

OPENING SPREAD

1. The verdant terrain of Kashmir is a balm for the mind; 2. Pahalgam is known for its picturesque and seemingly endless fields

THIS SPREAD

1. A Ashikara ride in Srinagar is a must; 2. Simply wandering through the meadows of Gulmarg will bring peace to your mind; 3. The majestic Zabarwan range, framed by fall's foliage

IN THE KNOW

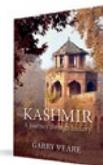

WHEN TO TRAVEL

Kashmir is always sublime, but if you want snow-clad alpine views, any time between October and December will be a feast for your eyes.

THE NEW PRINCESS

Join us, as we take an exclusive look under the bonnet of the first-of-its-kind aircraft in Indian aviation history.

by SIMON CLAYS

IT WASN'T BUT A FEW MONTHS BACK THAT THE FIRST of Vistara's Dreamliner-9's was winging its way back from Boeing's monster production facility in Seattle. The introduction of this kind of cutting-edge flying technology, coupled with comfort, seemed a chess move capable of turning Indian aviation on its head. Now, as Vistara takes delivery of its very first Airbus A321neo, the airline looks to have a fleet strategy that can only be described as a genuine gamechanger.

Like Boeing's 737 range, Airbus' A320/21 variants are the workhorses of the skies. There are more of these two civil airliners pushing tin around the planet than any other model of commercial airliners ever manufactured.

When Vistara's first neo touched the tarmac in Delhi, from its birthing nest in Hamburg, Germany, it marked a change in the way Indian travellers fly. For starters, the neo ups the efficiency ante of the Airbus 3 range. But, most importantly, its new engine type (neo is an acronym for New Engine Option) allows it around 10 percent more range to transport its fully loaded complement of 188 passengers. In Asia, that's a coup d'état of the oriental skies, and for mainland Europe and destinations like the United Kingdom, absolutely and effortlessly an easy option. Suddenly, a narrow-bodied aircraft has just turbo'ed into a domain that is normally reserved for the wide-bodied kings of medium-haul.

Right now, we live in a world on the cusp. The way we operate as human beings is under the microscope (strange, unseen germs and all), and our lives are quite literally up in the air. It's another reason Vistara opted

The Airbus A321neo boasts three classes of seats. Here's a look at the options available

BUSINESS CLASS

In a 2-by-2 configuration, the 12 full-flat seats in this class come with a 16-inch display for your viewing pleasure.

PREMIUM ECONOMY

The 24 seats in this section come with increased leg-room, and can recline back around 4.5 inches.

ECONOMY

Each seat comes with a high-definition touchscreen television and a four-way headrest for enhanced neck support.

for the neo; its numbers make for a greener, cleaner way forward, and how an airline's fleet can impact the future well-being of our planet is exemplary. Its engines are 50 percent quieter than any other variant; they are also 20 percent more fuel-efficient, and its built-in air filtration system flushes out bacteria and replenishes the entire cabin with fresh air every two to three minutes. So, breathe easy with the Vistara mantra: fly higher, healthier, safer.

But, perhaps, these points are hard to pick up on as you take to the skies, tricky for the layman to discern, even. Take a moment to look out of your window. Follow the plane's wing to its very end, and you'll see how the neo's tip arcs way up into what Airbus calls its sharklet. This simple exaggeration of design and character is the main contributing factor as to why you are flying onboard one of the most aerodynamic, efficient and controllable aircraft in the skies. Simple.

Perhaps, Mr. Leslie Thng, Chief Executive Officer, Vistara, sums it up the most succinctly when he says, "The A321neo aircraft ensures operational enhancement, cost effectiveness, as well as reduction of carbon footprint for us, while enabling extra payload capacity, greater fuel efficiency and higher range. All of these aspects perfectly align with our international growth strategy."

So, that's what's going on outside and under the craft, but what about the business end of things and how you fly neo. Business is a very good place to begin as Vistara's introduction of the neo over Indian skies, and outbound destinations, signals its launch of full-flat beds into the Business Class. This is a first in Indian aviation for a narrow-bodied jet, and the only one of its kind operating in South Asia. There is a total of 12 seats dedicated to flying in the pointy bit on Vistara's neo, configured two-by-two for maximum legroom and freedom of movement. That's if you can actually force yourself to think about doing anything other than sinking back into the comfort of a full leather finish. This is supported by 24 Premium Economy seats that occupy mid-deck, and a further 152 that make up the Economy seating in a single deck, three-by-three configuration.

Wherever you're seated, you'll be safe in the knowledge

Catch our new inflight safety video onboard the A321neo

This unique video showcases safety instructions demonstrated through Yoga asanas coupled with awe-inspiring Indian destinations; a true reflection of Vistara's Indian roots and global outlook.

Vistara is the first airline in South Asia to offer full-flat beds on a narrow-body aircraft of two steadfast things: one, Vistara's impeccable in-flight service and catering and, two, that each of the neo's plots is supported by the latest in seatback screens. Business Class seats come with 16 inches of viewing pleasure, while all other seats onboard are equipped with an impressive 10-inch display. Undoubtedly, the main draw, in whatever seat you occupy, is the access to the whopping 700 hours of viewing content on offer on Vistara World, the airline's Inflight Entertainment (IFE) system. That's around 150 Hollywood and Bollywood flicks, a mix of near to 500 short-format multi-lingual programmes, and a roster of around 250 full audio offerings. Add in state-of-the-art mapping, flight tracking, USB port charging in every seat, and you've got quite the comfort package.

ALL ABOARD

After its departure from the Airbus production facility in Hamburg, the plane landed in New Delhi to a socially-distanced but visibly excited reception.

The A321neo is lithe, willing and more than able to unleash a new type of flying experience upon the Indian psyche. Expect more neos. Expect Vistara to announce more routes. Expect to reach more distant dots of Asia in comfort. Expect early morning business productivity with onboard equipment and the right tools to do the right job. Expect to exit your neo experience with a smile on your face. I, for one, expect so. 🌟

ESCAPE COVER STORY

DAWN at THE CITY of LAKES

Udaipur offers a treasure trove of soulful experiences to soak up and uncover the city's inherent tranquillity.

by SUSHMITA SRIVASTAV

A view of Jag Mandir
Palace on Lake
Pichola

Tahir Ansari/Alamy Stock Photo

WITH THE ARAVALLIS CREATING A DRAMATIC BACKDROP FOR THE city, Lake Pichola snuggled in its heart like a coveted treasure, and gorgeous palaces that serenade visitors with stories of royalty, Udaipur has an uncanny ability to leave you with both a sense of awe and peace. Add to this, a sea of heritage hotels with holistic wellness treatments on offer, and a soulful local arts and crafts scene. The City of Lakes is for the mindful traveller who wants to stop and marvel at the regality of nature, and is an ideal pick if you are looking for a calming getaway that is swathed in Rajputana hospitality.

POETRY IN WATER AND STONE

Although its name translates to ‘the city of dawn’, Udaipur really springs to life once the fiery desert sun sets and the sprawling mansions and ghats start to gleam in a soft golden glow by the shimmering waters.

As dusk starts to fall, the sky dons hues of lilac on a fading yellow base and the turquoise water of Lake Pichola—the pièce de résistance of the city’s landscape—slowly turns into liquid gold. Birds start to return to their nests and the silence, occasionally punctuated by the sounds of ripples, feels surreal. Taking in this view while sauntering by the lake, or gliding on it in a boat as you watch the majestic City Palace wane in the background, is the best way to spend a balmy evening in Udaipur. Shrouded in greenery and peppered with lofty domes and ornate towers, Jag Mandir Palace looks like a true castaway island fantasy, shimmering in the middle of Pichola. Also make time to visit the Fateh Sagar Lake, which is home to the Nehru Park and Udaipur Solar Observatory. Udai Sagar, Doodh Talai, Swaroop Sagar, Rang Sagar and Govardhan Sagar are a few other lakes worth an evening stroll or two.

One can find the glorious past of the city living and breathing right in its narrow lanes, in the hand-painted ancestral abodes, in the conversations with a local over evening chai, but most of all in the age-old forts and palaces. To truly connect with this city's heart, the best way is to simply move through it. Weave through the serpentine alleys; the hill-top forts that overlook the princely lakes; the Ahar Cenotaphs that honour the royalty who shaped the city; the Gangaur and Ambrai ghats that exude a sense of serenity; and then, pause. Pay heed to the culture and calm that envelops you, and its ability to clear a heavy mind. After all, legend has it that the city was created after Maharana Uday Singh met a sage meditating in the Aravallis, which means Udaipur was born a healer.

For a peaceful time amidst nature, drive through winding swathes of green to the Sajjangarh Monsoon Palace to enjoy a panorama of the city. Sajjangarh Biological Park en route offers glimpses of sambar deer, hyenas, peacocks, Indian porcupines and, sometimes, even big cats. Saheliyon ki Bari, with its quaint maze of manicured gardens, pretty kiosks, cascading fountains, a lotus pool, and marble mannequins was built for Maharana Sangram Singh's beloved queen and her 48 maidens, and looks straight out of a pretty postcard.

PLATEFULS OF SOUL

Whether it is traditional Rajasthani cuisine served by the lakeside, or a delicious Italian spread in a cute café, each meal in Udaipur is special as much for the food, as for its serene setting.

It is almost unreal how most of the dining options here are done in pretty al fresco settings next to a glittering lake. The Bedla family runs Royal Repast and leverages its expertise in serving up a sumptuous Rajasthani fare. For a wholesome thali, look no further than the famous Ambrai at Amet Haveli, where you can sit down in a jharokha in the lawn and look at the majestic City Palace. Upre is more of an informal, open-air setting, with private cabanas available on request, overlooking Lake Pichola.

It was the year 1983 when Roger Moore arrived in Udaipur to shoot the 13th James Bond classic, Octopussy. Years later, the city continues to bring the Hollywood star alive every evening in the cafés and bistros nestled in the busy by-lanes. Catch the Bond blockbuster on the big screen as you indulge in pizzas loaded with farm fresh veggies at the artsy Café O'Zen. Millets of Mewar believes in the power of sustainable food—the menu includes vegan, gluten-free and organic options made with fresh local ingredients. A vintage villa that also works as a café is what you get at 1559 AD. Inspired by the year Udaipur was founded in, it is the favourite hangout of locals who flock here. The lovely art nouveau café of Palki Khana located at the Shiv Niwas Palace is famous for its European-influenced menu.

HEART OF CREATIVITY

As much as Udaipur is known for its lakes, it is also known for its art and creativity, which manifests itself in everything from wall murals to palaces. You would be remiss to not check out the works of local artisans who, owing to their rich lineage, churn out creations that surpass one's imagination.

No art aficionado should leave this city without buying a traditional pichvai painting. The age-old technique of painting on cloth traces its origins to Nathdwara near Udaipur more than 400 years ago, and has artists intricately showcasing tales from Lord Krishna's life. For a spot that has it all, Beyond Square stocks pichvai paintings, tables inlaid with marble and thekri work, and decorative art and agate stone furniture. Or, try Gothwal Art, a store run by a husband-wife artist duo.

Make your way to Bada Bazaar, and expect to be greeted by nothing less than the city's renowned kachori stalls. The market, while known for its variety of bric-à-brac, has many spots where you can sit back and watch the medley of colours paint an ever-moving canvas of life. From silver jewellery, jootis, bandhani saris to leather diaries, you'll be able to pick up many reminders of your holiday. But, if you were to pick just one thing, let it be a pair of beautifully finished lacquer earrings from Hathipole market. ⚙️

Moments in Time

Street photographers seek inspiration from how people interact with the world. Here are some frames that allow for reflection and introspection, while also giving you a sense of peace.

Serenity
Taking flight at first light, the birds create a blanket of white as they circle the river and the boats in Varanasi.

Nostalgia
The power of coming together can't find better personification. Playing outdoors will always be therapeutic, like these children in Delhi prove.

Rise
Often, it is just a fleeting glance that turns something ordinary into a powerful statement. This frame, shot in Vrindavan near Mathura, is a metaphor for thinking big and soaring higher.

"Street photography is about that transitory lie that lies behind the truth; it's a 'pause' button in a live movie, the minute we press the 'play' button, every character starts performing again."
VINEET VOHRA

“Street photography is life. It’s a way for me to connect with the outside world and to make sense of my surroundings. I use it as both a stress buster as well as a diary to document the magic that the world around me offers.”

Contemplation

Self-care is a mantra to follow, and preferably by being one with nature, as it can be a soothing experience for your senses. Like on this beach in Mumbai amid the fluttering pigeons, the smell of the sea and the sound of the waves.

Rumination

It is a location that prompts philosophical renderings, and Pushkar is one of those places where the soul of the desert rekindles with the sun. This frame blurs the lines between dusk and dawn, time and space, now and forever.

“Street photography relies on raw emotions and interactions with people on the street. But, most importantly, the size of the camera doesn’t matter.”

ESCAPE IMMERSION

On the Banks of Serenity

A paradoxical melange of chaos and calm, the city of Varanasi offers a cultural and spiritual reset.

by RASHIMA NAGPAL

ON THE BANKS OF RIVER GANGA, GOOD OLD BENARAS—now known as Varanasi—warrants a trip that is as spiritually engaging as it is culturally fascinating, almost any time of the year. While believers of Hinduism solemnly swear by the town's sacred character, many travellers from around the world have stood witness to its intoxicating liveliness. Not to mention, it is one of the world's oldest continuously inhabited cities. The 80-plus ghats in Varanasi are the obvious attraction for anyone who comes here for a trip that not only celebrates life, but also reminds you of its transient nature. But in its narrow winding alleys, away from the famous ghats, you will find glorious nuances that lend the city an appeal like no other.

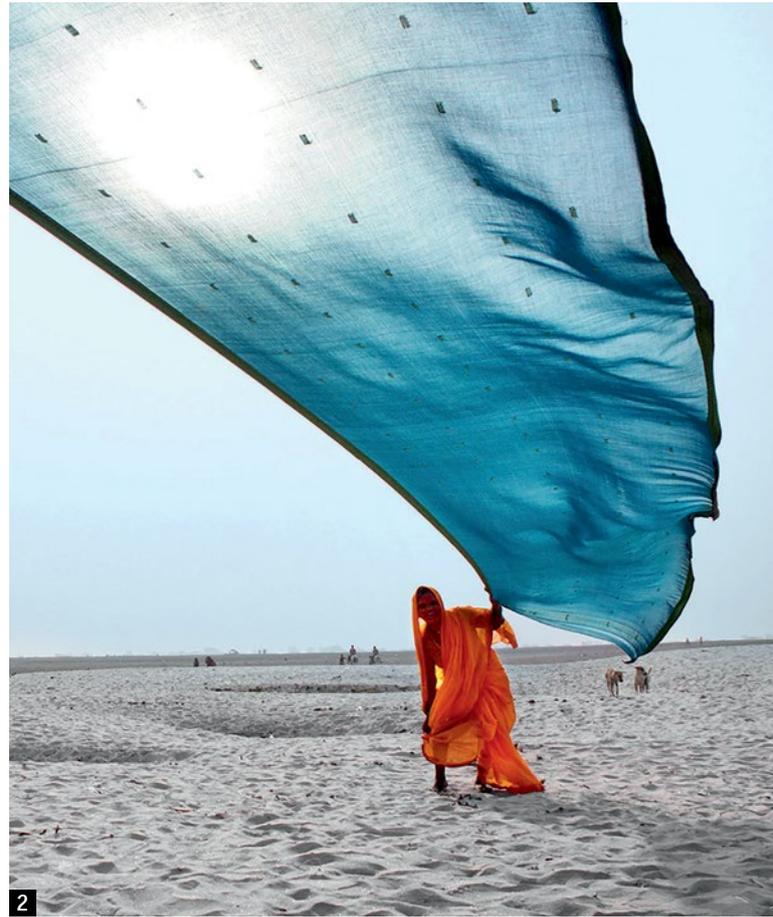

THIS SPREAD
 1. The ghats of Varanasi have seen many a spiritual divination; 2. The city is believed to be one of the oldest in the world and pilgrims from all over flock to it

The peaceful lanes of Kabir Chaura will take you 500 years back in time, to the period when mystic Kabir used to call Kashi (as Varanasi was then known) his home. Today, the Kabir Math is redolent of his spiritual life. You will find his slippers and water bottle preserved in a shrine, and the well from which he is said to have drawn water is located close to the graves of his parents, Niru and Nima. The Panchganga Ghat (supposedly the confluence of the five holy rivers), marked by a small shrine beside the river, is believed to be the site of his initiation. Surrounding the math are quiet paths lined with murals of his verses. Kabir Chaura is also home to many music schools, instantly recognisable by the music notes painted on their walls.

A MELODIOUS JOURNEY OF THE SENSES

In another fascinating aspect of Varanasi, Indian classical music takes over your senses. From neighbourhood cafés that host musicians on a daily basis to full-fledged concerts such as the Sankat Mochan Music Festival, Dhrupad Mela, Ganga Mahotsav—the city’s rich relationship with music is more than evident. Even today, you’ll find disciples practising their ragas early in the morning. Locales such as the Bengali Tola Road are replete with age-old music schools and stores that sell handmade musical instruments, and are exclusively explored to experience the vibrant music culture. The International Music Centre near Dashashwamedh Ghat, run by a family of musicians, is popular as the oldest music school in Varanasi, and also hosts sublime performances by noted artists regularly.

Look for a 300-year-old haveli—Bhartendu Bhawan—hidden away in the bylanes of Thatheri Bazar. Easy to miss amid the cacophony of the market teeming with tourists, the house belongs to playwright, poet and author, Bhartendu Harishchandra. If nothing else, his Andher Nagri would ring a bell. Inside the 18th-century haveli, a gazebo lit with vintage lamps stands in the middle of the courtyard, surrounded by numerous fountains. There are rooms on all sides of the courtyard, some of them still occupied by the poet’s family. As somebody who was called the father of modern Hindi literature and who did exemplary work in his short lifespan of 34 years, Harishchandra’s haveli in Varanasi is symbolic of the city’s literary past, and offers an enchanting peek back in time.

Also in the streets of Varanasi, you will find a food culture bursting at the seams. From carts selling baati-chokha, jalebis, kachauri-sabzi; government-approved shops that offer ‘special’ thandai, which is infused with bhaang or cannabis; a range of chaat stalls, countless paanwallahs, and much more, the atmospheric city makes for a memorable food tour.

20,000

ACCORDING TO ESTIMATES,
 THERE ARE OVER 20,000
 TEMPLES IN VARANASI

A boat ride in Varanasi offers the most serene experience

In its narrow winding alleys, away from the famous ghats, you will find glorious nuances that lend the city an appeal like no other.

A DIVINE INTERVENTION

Predominantly associated with Lord Shiva, the city continues to be a treasure trove for those enthusiastic about mythology. For starters, mythically, Varanasi sits on the middle prong of Shiva's trishul. The Manikarnika Ghat, a major cremation ground, was apparently condemned as the spot to forever have funeral pyres by none other than Lord Shiva. There's definitely no escaping the dozens of lingams dotting the temples, lining the walls, crammed against shelves. In an extraordinary instance, however, there's a Phaware Wale Masjid, where a Shiva lingam stands in the courtyard of the mosque. The fact that for over 300 years now, this has been a place of worship for a mix of communities, is a true revelation of the harmony this city imbues.

Every day in Varanasi is a treat in its own right, but this 'City of Lights' truly comes alive on Dev Deepavali. While most celebrate the triumph of good over evil on the new moon night of Diwali, Varanasi celebrates Dev Deepavali—literally, the Diwali of the Gods—on the full moon 15 nights after Diwali. During this time, the Gods and Goddesses themselves are believed to land on Earth. Another myth attributes the festival to the defeat of the demon Tripurasura by the city's patron deity, Shiva. Thousands of clay lamps light up the ghats, with the spectacular Ganga aarti being performed in full fervour. It is an experience that, despite its energetic nature, makes time stand still.

On any given day, I'd round up a trip in Varanasi with a boat ride along the river at dusk, watching the vibrant Ganga aarti from the other side, hoping to make a little more sense out of the city, and of life. ✨

ENGINEER YOUR ENVIRONMENT

Shayamal Vallabhjee highlights how balancing the external and internal environment is one of the best ways to calm yourself and manage uncertainty.

Jim Bunch's Nine Environments

PHYSICAL Where you live, where you work, the clothes you wear and the devices/technology you use.

BODY Your overall physical well-being, the food you eat, your hygiene and fitness levels.

MEMETICS The information you consume through books, podcasts, films and websites.

SPIRITUAL Beyond meditation, breath-work, and mindfulness, this component refers to your level of empathy for those around you.

FINANCIAL Your accounts, investments, and things that can help secure you financially.

RELATIONSHIPS The quality of your interactions with people you surround yourself with.

NETWORK An extension of your relationships, but in particular, they represent the tribes, communities, and social networks you engage with.

NATURE The environment you interact with on a daily basis. Your outdoor ecosystem, your geography—macro (country, city) and micro (street, garden).

SELF Everything that defines you (feelings, values, strengths, weaknesses, personality, emotions). The self is the ninth environment in the external that transmutes into the internal.

“WE ARE SURROUNDED BY environments. Everything you can see, hear, smell, taste and touch is an environment that is either adding energy to your life or draining energy from your life.’ These are the words of Jim Bunch, the founder of ‘The Ultimate Game of Life’. Jim conceptualised the nine environments that make up your life, which takes the nature versus nurture debate to a level deeper. According to Jim, everything that you interact with, twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, is a part of your environment.

When I first stumbled upon Jim’s concept, I was floored by its genius. Not because I did not consider the impact of these components on performance. We are always looking into each of them; but sometimes, in looking at the bigger picture, we inevitably turn a blind eye to some of the more nuanced components that play an integral role in performance enhancement. Jim’s list gives us tangible check-points that we can measure on a daily or weekly basis. As Galileo says, “Measure what is measurable, and make measurable what is not.”

You must have probably noticed how subtle the differences are between some of these micro-environments. When I first studied these micro-environments, I challenged myself: Am I optimising my environment for success or trying to optimise myself in my default environment?

I cannot overstate the importance of new-habit formation in becoming a better version of yourself. New habits can be developed by reprogramming your subconscious mind through the conscious repetition of an activity. Most of us struggle to cultivate a new habit because we are trying to do something new in an old environment. The old environment is your comfort zone; and trying to reprogramme a new habit within the comfort zone is incredibly difficult, if not impossible. Which brings me to another significant realisation: You cannot heal yourself in the same environment that caused you pain.

To cultivate a new habit, you basically have two options: you can either rely on your will power to drive you, or design your environment to help you achieve it.

Remember that each environment impacts the next; so a positive change in one should bring about a positive change in another.

Let's say you are someone who wants to wake up at sunrise to meditate. In your current environment, you may need to set an alarm and then rely on your will power to get out of bed. Engineering your environment for success could entail switching from black-out blinds to slightly translucent curtains that allow the morning sunlight in. This small redesign of your environment will help resync your circadian rhythm to the rising sun, and before you realise it, waking up will no longer be a chore. When you start to think about your environment as an extension of who you are, success is no more a matter of 'if it will happen' but rather 'when it will happen'.

Designing your environment to work for you requires mindfulness and awareness. First, you must identify what you would like to achieve. This is your vision board. I generally encourage people to break down their vision or goals into macro, meso and micro goals.

Macro goals are your long-term goals that may take you between one to two years to achieve. I wouldn't recommend having such elaborate goals that you cannot envision them materialising within two years. Besides being extremely difficult to remain motivated for that long, you are also evolving as a person. In two years, these goals may not be as important, or they may have changed.

Meso goals are medium-term goals that may take you between three to six months to achieve. They are broken up into weekly and monthly goals or targets that help you stay focused and allow you to assess your progress.

Micro goals are tiny habits and immediate objectives that, when stacked up over time, help you achieve your meso and macro goals. These are the most important. This is where your focus should be.

When you think about designing your environment, you need to have your micro goals in mind. As a rule of thumb, if you are going to redesign your external environment, start with changes that are measurable. Remember that each environment impacts the next; so a positive change in one should bring about a positive change in another.

The DIY Optimisation Guide

I am going to walk you through a few small changes you could make to your environments:

- Clean the air filters in your air conditioner, and use air purifiers at night, because dust pollutants can impact sleep.
- Keep the room at 19/20 degrees Celsius at night. Cooler temperatures promote better sleep.
- Switch to a standing desk at work. If you are sitting, you can swap your chair for a Swiss Ball. The ball improves your core stability and the constant movement is healthy for the spine.

- Spend twenty minutes a day walking barefoot. It grounds your energy, is rejuvenating, and stimulates the acupressure points on your feet. Preferably do this in nature.
- Cold showers in the morning and evening help reduce inflammation. If you cannot have a cold shower, try a hot/cold contrast shower (20 seconds cold, 10 seconds warm x 10 cycles)
- Switch your vegetable oils to cold-pressed oils. Vegetable oil is the biggest contributor to inflammation in the body.
- Deep breathing exercises (Pranayama) stimulate the vagus nerve which promotes relaxation, reduces inflammation, improves memory and the neural conductivity between the gut and the brain.

- Improve your information absorption by writing down key points while you are listening to a podcast or audio book.
- Start journaling your thoughts and emotions. There should be a minimum of three entries a week. Practice being emotionally present when someone speaks to you. This is the secret to effective communication.
- Find a mentor who can guide you.

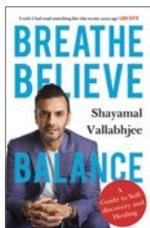

Knowing the type of person that you are is the first step to becoming the person you want to be. You can commit to a daily practice that helps you centre yourself. Yoga, journaling, meditation, breath-work, and sitting in silence are all wonderful practices to explore.

These basic guidelines for each environment are only a starting point in your personal journey of growth. The purpose of life is to evolve into a better version of yourself. Because we are significantly affected by our environment, we must become mindful of the environment we create.

Spirituality teaches us that we are a part of the whole. Each of the nine environments is part of the whole. We may feel like we are experiencing a higher degree of success in one domain as compared to another, but because all parts are interconnected, success becomes interconnected too.

Use this reality to improve your life. Improvements in some domains will be easier. Use them as much as you can. Be mindful of the other domains but do not fight the initial resistance in the other areas. Embrace them and with time they will all merge organically. 🌱

A RAY OF HOPE

By educating children and women, and imparting the skill set they need to succeed in life, KHUSHII strives to empower and transform lives.

by PALLAVI SINGH

SEEING THAT QUALITY EDUCATION is one of the 17 global goals that make up the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development adopted by the United Nations, the commendable progress made by Kinship for Humanitarian, Social, and Holistic Intervention in India (KHUSHII) deserves the spotlight. Founded by former Indian cricketer Kapil Dev together with four other like-minded individuals, Vandana Luthra, Harveen Kapoor, Rita Bose and Kapil Kumria, the activities of the NGO revolve around giving children a chance to succeed by educating them, counselling them, teaching them vocational skills, and supporting their families and communities. “From the day that we started KHUSHII, I had a vision of a prosperous India in my mind and my heart, with education being the torch. It is education that acts as the brightest star and a guiding light in our lives, especially for those who are less privileged,” says Kapil Dev, Chairperson, KHUSHII.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Having started with a 12-point community development programme in a village in Neemrana, Rajasthan, the organisation expanded its reach to 100 villages; the programme was eventually adopted by the state government. After that, the NGO started remedial education and community development programmes in Delhi. The flagship project Swatantra Shikshaantra took shape at KHUSHII’s tributary school in Delhi’s Sangam Vihar locality. A community-based education centre, the school caters to students with learning difficulties and benefits approximately 400-500 students annually. Kalyani Devi, whose daughter studies there, says, “Apart from studies, my daughter Madhuri has become more confident. I wish to thank KHUSHII for helping my daughter’s all-round development.” Additionally, mid-day meals, psychological and career counselling and health camps are provided to the students. This project was soon followed by Shikshaantra Plus in 2016, a programme that works within government schools to fill gaps in education and provide a holistic learning experience.

The NGO also works to improve the socio-economic status of families via their Shiksha Aur Vikas initiative. It holds vocational training and adult-literacy sessions for women and young adults to find livelihood opportunities for them.

THE COVID-19 RESPONSE

Responding to those affected by COVID-19 was a clarion call for the country and the world. Joining forces with the government and frontline professionals, KHUSHII reached out to communities by adopting a two-pronged approach: one was to set up a COVID-19 Relief Fund to support relief activities on-ground in collaboration with the state governments and local health departments. The other was to share information with communities to keep them safe and contain COVID-19 through structured interactions with Anganwadi workers and direct messaging, phone calls and social media campaigns.

However, the most admirable part is that in spite of the surreal situation, the NGO has continued to run its regular education, mental health and community development programmes, while strictly adhering to the safety parameters prescribed by the government. Teachers plan a routine together with the children, have open conversations and conduct online activities for them. To ensure holistic development, they engage with the parents to share tips for supporting homeschooling. Om Prakash Meena, Principal, SDMC Pratibha School (for boys), New KHUSHII has been running mental health and counselling services for nearly 42,000 children.

Delhi, says, “We are so happy that despite the lockdown, we have succeeded in reaching out to students by means of online tutorials. We have ensured that students have the requisite resources to study via a digital platform. It is our earnest desire that children do not lag behind on account of the pandemic.”

To support children facing the new realities of their parents’ temporary unemployment, homeschooling and lack of physical facilities, KHUSHII has initiated a blended learning project in nine locations around the country to deliver education via mobile phones (both smartphones and feature phones) to encourage learning at home. The NGO has been running mental health and counselling services for close to 42,000 children through the Shikshaantra Plus programme in government schools.

Over the next few years, KHUSHII hopes to impact at least two million more lives through its work. The idea is to evolve the programmes to benefit from the government’s new education policy and broad base the use of technology and remote learning to maximise their impact. ⚙️

WHY I TRAVEL

Multi-hyphenate Nora Fatehi shares her travel essentials and what she misses the most about the joy of travelling.

What comes to your mind when we say ‘first travel memory’?

I remember the first time I was allowed to travel alone. It was the most liberating experience. I was 11-years-old and my mom—after I begged her for months—allowed me to travel to Paris alone to meet my cousin. I stayed with her for a month and got to see all the amazing places in the city. It was the first time I was away from my family for so long. The experience of travelling on the flight alone and reaching France gave me a sense of independence and a rush of excitement.

What kind of traveller are you?

I’m a posh traveller. I love expensive places, restaurants, good food, amazing shopping, basking in the sun, spending time in really nice hotels, and visiting as many beaches as possible.

Your all-time favourite destination?

I have a few all-time favourite destinations: Morocco, Dubai, Miami, Dominican Republic, and I’m sure there are many more places I need to visit first so I can add them to my list of favourite destinations.

A destination on your bucket list?

Maldives, Egypt, Tunisia, Aruba, Jamaica and Ibiza.

Three things you never travel without?

My swimwear, my make-up and my tracksuits.

What is your idea of a perfect holiday?

My idea of a perfect holiday is the beach or the pool, sun-bathing, listening to music with my friends, and being close to the mall so I can shop in the evening.

Your favourite travel companion?

My friend Marcelo is my favourite travel companion.

How do you like to spend your day when you’re not shooting?

When I’m not shooting, I love to spend time at home or with my friends. If it’s an outdoor shoot schedule and I have an off, I’ll take Marcelo and run to the beach.

Once restrictions are lifted, what is the first place you want to visit?

I want to go to the Maldives as soon as possible!

Three things that have kept you grounded during this lockdown?

I’ve always been grounded, but the three things that have kept me sane are cooking/cleaning, FaceTiming with family and friends, and planning my future projects at home.

What do you miss the most about travelling?

I miss absolutely everything about it and I can’t wait to go back because travelling has become an integral part of my career and lifestyle in the last couple of years. 🌟
